CHAPTER III
METHODOLOGY OF RESEARCH

3.1 Objects of Research

In the study, the object or location of the research is very important to set out focused on the desired target. Therefore, the objects of research in this study are synonym of language in the village of Banggai District Salangano Totikum, Banggai Islands.

3.2 Research Design

This study used a qualitative method. Sugiyono (2008:1) stated that qualitative research is a method of research used to examine the condition of natural objects, the component experiment where the researcher is as a key instrument. It has two steps, the first step is identifying the data, and in this part the researcher explains the similarities and differences synonym in English and Banggai Language. The second step is classifying the data by choosing it based on their forms and functions.

3.3 Sources of Data

Arikunto (1998:114) argued that “the source of data in the study were subjects from which data can be obtained”. Source of data in the study consisted of primary data sources and secondary data sources. Primary data in this study are Banggai Community and Society, for example native speaker of Banggai as Banggai people. While the secondary data is sources that support this research namely the local government for example, data from the object of research as the data informant and the data of Banggai district.

3.4 Techniques of Collecting the Data

The procedure of collecting the data I conducted according to the purpose of research. Technique of collecting the data implemented in this research is observation technique it is an activity survey for collecting the data related to the research problem. In this case, the researcher observed the people knowledge about Banggai language, especially the synonym in Banggai language and also English language, researches conducted people understood the language English especially teacher English.

Interview technique is an activity to conduct interviews with the source of the data research. In this case, the researcher interview with the native speaker of Banggai language.

3.5 Techniques of Analyzing the Data

The techniques of analyzing the data the first researchers to check back the results of interviews have been conducted thoroughly. The second Researchers in detail write every synonym of research results. And the last is concluded, based on research results from various parties.